Pillaton Village News

No. 152 March 2011

There are several things to remember on Sunday 27th March. The clocks go forward by one hour with the change to British Summer Time and there is also the 2011 Census to complete. For some, the requirement to complete a census will be seen as unnecessary bureaucracy, for government it is deemed an important planning tool, whilst for many it has become an indispensable genealogical resource.

From 1801 the first four censuses in England were mainly statistical and it was not until 1841 that the names of individuals were recorded. If you have never looked back through your family history via the census then you might be in for a few surprises. The vast majority of people in the Victorian era were very poor and it is not uncommon to find ancestors living in the workhouse. Sometimes it was just chance, such as a career in the Services or marriage into a more prosperous family that lead to an improvement in circumstances. You can even find your surname should be something completely different. In the early census years many householders were illiterate. This meant family details had to be compiled by enumerators who just wrote down what they heard, leading to misspellings that could be perpetuated for generations to come. In my case for about 20 years a rather posh looking 'D'Wane,' before it reverted back to the more common 'Dwane,' originally from Southern Ireland.

PILLATON WI

Pillaton WI Learns Belly Dancing

It may have been grey, wet and cold outside, but Pillaton Village Hall was full of colour for our January meeting, when Eastern Spice brought a glimpse of the exotic Middle East into our lives.

Sheila Buchanan and her team — Toni, Barbara and Jean — had come along to share their love of belly dancing with us. A traditional form of Middle Eastern dance, with its origins rooted in the folk traditions of ancient Arab tribal regions, it was popularised in Western lands during the Romantic movement of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. The "danse du ventre", as the French termed it, drew audiences in to the burlesque theatres of the era. It also became associated with Romanies, or travelling gypsies, who added their own rhythms and interpretations to the original forms of the dance, disseminating it as they travelled westwards

Today, belly dancing is a fusion of different styles and cultures, including influences from flamenco, gypsy and Egyptian dance, even Indian, as evidenced by the use of dance in Bollywood musicals.

The dance style has been embraced by some of our modern day popular singers, too, with Britney Spears, Christine Aguilera and Beyoncé all having been filmed performing belly dance.

The Eastern Spice ladies came attired in their own colourful costumes, each representing a different style of the dance. It came alive when we watched them perform — shimmies, hip hits, undulations, pops and locks...they made it look effortless, elegant and fluid. Toni explained that her style of dance was a duet between the dancer and the drummer, an improvisation following the drummer's lead. Barbara offered up a dance described as a fusion of flamenco and traditional belly dance. Jean demonstrated Bollywood belly dance, where the hands and facial movements help to tell the story. Sheila showed us a dance with the veil, telling us that dancing in this way can help strengthen arms and shoulders.

They brought along a selection of brightly coloured silk harem pants, flowing skirts, lighter-than-air veils and beaded and fringed hip belts and bras for us to see and handle.

The hall was a buzz as we swapped woolly jumpers and scarves – the heating wasn't great that evening! – for hip belts tied over our own clothes. None of us felt brave enough to strip off and reveal bare midriffs in the chilly January air, but under Eastern Spice's encouraging tuition, we had a go at some of the movements. As we struggled to undulate, shimmy and thrust our hips amidst great hilarity, we were aware our efforts looked nothing like the dancing we had seen performed, but we had great fun and at least it warmed us up. As my school report used to say: "Needs more effort."

The business meeting reminded members that their subscriptions for the coming year are now due and should be paid to our Treasurer, Sue Archer, please. We are also reminded that the Resolutions for 2011 are to be voted for and details are in the WI Life magazine.

Pottering in February

A cheeky character took shape in front of our eyes as guest speaker, potter Rob Fierek, started off our February meeting's pottery workshop with a quick demonstration of his craft. Skilfully rolling the malleable clay between his hands, Rob assembled the body parts — a ball for the head, eyes made of different, whiter clay, a carrot shape for the body, a tapered sausage shape for arms and a fatter sausage for legs. This little guy even had clothes, as Rob pinched out the base of the body to create the appearance of a flared jacket and flattened a circle of clay to make a floppy hat.

And there he sat – looking up at the sky with a grin fashioned by the stroke of a sharp stick, holding on to his hat with one hand!

While he worked, Rob chatted about his career, telling us how he had escaped the classroom for the pottery and explaining about the techniques of modelling with clay. Our little man was possibly the half millionth figure he has created since setting up his workshop in Albaston in the mid 1970s, but to our eyes he was unique.

Then it was our turn to have a go and Rob set us the task of creating teddy bears. Again, he gave a quick demonstration of how to make the body parts, this time shorter and fatter to create the bear shape, with snout, ears and paws to finish the look.

We got rolling. The clay felt cold and wet and soon our hands took on a death like grey appearance! The bears we created looked like victims of some science fiction experiment and certainly nothing like the traditional cuddly image of a much loved teddy. How could Rob have made it look so easy? Still, we all agreed it had been fun and rather like being back at playschool.

The business meeting included some important reminders. Subscriptions for the coming year are due by the end of March and should be paid to our Treasurer, Sue Archer, please. We have Pillaton WI's Birthday Party meal to look forward to on March 19 in Pillaton Village Hall, when members and their husbands, partners or friends are invited to enjoy a meal prepared by Shirley Floyd. Members should pay Sue for their meal as soon as possible. There will be a raffle at the meal in support of ShelterBox.

Other dates for your diaries include the charity collection for Operation Sunshine in Pillaton Village Hall on 18 March and events detailed in County News – Speakers' Auditions Day on 11 April and Spring Countdown on 19 April.

Our next meeting will be the Annual Meeting on 14 March, when we will welcome a County Advisor to take us through the process of forming a new committee for the coming year.

Pillaton WI is a friendly group and welcomes new members. We meet in Pillaton Village Hall at 7.30 pm on the second Monday of each month. Come along and meet us! If you would like to know more about Pillaton WI, please contact Ann Henderson on 01579 351289.

FRUIT CASE

I hardly dare write it down in case I am proved wrong, but it almost feels as spring is here. The hesitant, hic-cupping, hot then cold, blissfully warm mornings that are petrified with frost, is an unnerving beginning to the gardening season. The delicious smudge of orange yellow crocus, quiet nodding of the daffodil bells, the swelling buds and the brilliant flares of camellias all signify that whatever the weather may decide to do, flora and fauna have decided that winter has been put to bed.

One tragedy of spring is the annual cull of toads. The rainy nights of 3 or 4 weeks back sent these gardening helpmates on their magnetic migration back to the ponds of their birth. Not for payment of taxes, but for the joyful fornication of the amphibian gang bang, that is best pond joke of spring.

The lucky ones reached their parties, but it was sad to see the splattered remains of several toads, in varying states of decay, on the road through the village...the massacre of the innocent. Toads move at night for safety, but their slow leisured walk is no protection, neither is the scent they exude to protect them from being eaten, and most tragic of all, their instinctive act of playing possum when threatened, for it is absolutely no help against the thick, fast tread of rubber tyre, as it prints their death on the tarmac. The small toad is invisible to the motorist at night. Morning dog walks bears witness to the small flattened bodies that, get grayer and less recognizable each day, till they are just discernible from the tarmac by a change of texture, or outline of a foot. No wonder a solitary toad sought sanctuary in the church on Sunday.

All this rising sap, has driven the ladies of the village to seek out new bodies [for themselves, I hasten to add] the Pilates class in the village hall on Thursday mornings is very popular and gossip is full of the merits of various diets.

I have to admit the village has become busier with the warmer weather, the sounds of mower, strimmer and saw, blends with birdsong. Talk of decorating and sounds of D.I.Y, and the noise of busy people are a background for the bees. The WI are revving up for another collection for 'Operation Sunshine', the gathering of everything unwanted [details on notice boards] to be sent to needy countries in the Third world. Interesting to know that our old welly boots protects Africans from creatures boring into their feet. It is a really great chance to get rid of wheel barrows [used as ambulances] old bicycles too. Last time I donated Wilf's old bike, I thought he would have been amused by the idea of his bike being used in Africa, as he had worked in Nigeria and Zambia as State Horticultural/ Agricultural Officer. Please support this very worthwhile appeal, we have SO much.

I am not short of exercise, whilst I was at Pilates, my delivery of compost arrived so I had the backbreaking job of carting it round to the greenhouse; usually the driver does this for me. It is galling to get old and not be able to throw heavy sacks in a barrow and manoeuvre it without grunting in the most bestial way.

Jobs a plenty to do. My gardener, Simon, [no you cannot have him he is booked a year in advance!] comes when I can afford him, to do heavy jobs, usually 1 day a month. Last month we dismantled a wooden shed that was too close to the house, for me to paint the house wall. No amount of Pilates, gardening or dieting could get me into an 18" gap, and decorate! On his next visit we have to re-erect the shed, in a different location, and he is to construct another raised bed for soft fruit, as the others a have proved so successful. I am still eating the blackcurrants I grew last summer, scrumptious.

My greenhouse is bursting with a range of re-potted plants, sprouting tulips for my door step, as well as many seed trays of young vegetables and flowers. The greenhouse is 25° x 10° but with all the rescued overwintered plants waiting to be moved out, it feels overcrowded!

I really enjoy the short walk with the dog in the morning to note the subtle changes of colour in the view down the valley. The low hanging mists have been replaced, by the slow, circling buzzard dance, and the gradual warming of tones that denote spring growth.

Pedestrians have a chance to see the small and wider view, and I grow angry at the increase of litter and dog mess on the verges. I taught my small children to always put any litter they had, in my coat pockets, when we were out. A point of great hilarity when my pockets were emptied. Our village is usually clean, but yesterday I put the 'Hot Deli' rat chewed wrapper in the dog-poo bin. The increase in dog mess on the verges is unnecessary, as the village has three poobins. I always equate such dog owners' behavior to those of 'bad campers', who leave a beauty spot with soiled stark white tissues, amidst the blue bells.

My recent project is re-landscaping the large space left where the cedar was removed. A prominent bed in full view of the conservatory, with excellent soil, it had to be filled with camellias. Using Stonehenge moving techniques, I dragged, pivoted, swiveled and heaved, several large shrubs to cover the horrid bare bed.

Wilf, as a professional plantsman, had taught me that no plant was too big to be moved I All of these shrubs had previously been in cramped, dry or impoverished positions, so I felt I was giving all of us a fillip. I am pleased with the result, especially as the plants cost nothing, planted with such care using a new RHS fungus to help root development...we shall see, at least I am not watching that space!

NEIGHBOURHOOD WATCH

OIL THEFTS

Devon and Cornwall Police are advising both businesses and residents to continue to be vigilant, given the recent reports of Fuel and Heating Oil thefts in our area. With recent increases in the price of fuel and heating oil these have become very attractive to thieves.

In order to assist the Police, it is recommended that regular checks are made on containers holding oil and fuel, and where possible, extra security measures are considered such as alarmed padlocks, a tank cage, etc.

You should report any suspicious activity that you see around fuel tanks on 999 and if possible please take notes of descriptions and vehicle registration numbers.

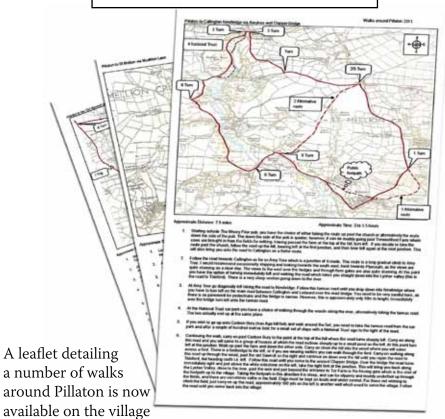

BANK SCAM

The police have received reports of persons attending addresses, purporting to be from a bank or on behalf of the resident's bank, to collect their bank cards. Various reasons have been given for collecting these cards and the courier has handed over a very convincing fake new card. Prior to the visit the residents were contacted by telephone from persons pretending to be from their bank/building society to arrange the collection.

Under no circumstances should you give your bank/credit cards or the details on them to anyone, whether they attend in person, telephone or ask you to post.

Investigations are ongoing to locate the suspect. So far the reports received have been from elderly residents, at this time we cannot say whether the courier is genuine or not but ask for you to phone 999 if you have persons with a similar story at your door or 08452 777 444 if you have any information.

WALKING ON THE WEB

web site – www.pillaton.org.uk Maps and directions are given for six different walks with distances that vary from about 2.5 up to 8 miles. All routes start and finish (surprisingly!) at the Weary Friar with full directions and advice given about walking in the countryside. Included with some of the longer walks are suggested "bale out" alternative routes should extreme weariness overtake you or the weather turn inclement.

Andrew Harris has produced the leaflet and he has included photographs of some of the key points on the routes including the more obscure way marks and turnings. The leaflet is in PDF file format (2.2 Mb), which can be viewed on screen or printed as required.

BATH HALF MARATHON

First of all, I am so grateful to have received such a positive response, so far, to my Sponsorship Appeal.

Although the pressure is off me to some extent, having run the Bath Half Marathon on 6th March, I still have in mind two other events leading up to the Paris Marathon in April.

Do please feel free to fill in the Sponsorship Form and cheque of your choice to "St. Mellion with Pillaton P.C.C." As I have said in the past, the books do not close until the 31st of December each year.

If anyone is at all interested, the Bath Half Marathon is quite special, with 12,000 entries, and is very well organised. The statistics are immense, just to get so many people to the start line, using park and ride, rail services from many parts and city centre car parks, etc. On the Saturday night, the place is just heaving with every restaurant table taken and a few beers are indulged.

The race comprises two circuits and the leaders lap us halfway round as we plod on. If all is well, after about 10 miles, one comes across the "walking wounded" suffering blisters, lost toenails, torn hamstrings, dodgy knees, sprained ankles, dehydration and those just not fit enough through lack of training. Around the last bend provides an adrenalin rush that instils a sprint finish! All that means no positive change, but one gets the feeling that soon it will "be just a memory"!

Thank you all again for your tremendous support—our reserves were, of necessity, somewhat depleted in 2010.
